A New Hobby

In a small town fourteen-year-old Mia felt bored with her routine. School was fine, her friends were great but she dreamt of something new.

One sunny afternoon she was doing the cleaning in the attic of her old house. Suddenly she found a dusty box. Mia opened it and discovered her grandmother's long-forgotten collection of watercolors and brushes. She also pulled out a piece of canvas. "Maybe I can try painting!" she thought.

That evening Mia set up a stand with canvas in her room and started to paint. At first, her pictures looked like children's drawings. Mia understood that she wanted to paint like a professional artist. So she joined an art school. There she learnt to blend colors, create shadows and even experiment with different styles.

Mia's love for painting grew. She painted landscapes, portraits of her friends and most of all she liked to paint animals. She went to the zoo at weekends and spent hours sitting on a bench in front of the cages. When she revealed her artwork at the school art fair, everyone was amazed at her realistic illustrations. For Mia, painting wasn't just a hobby — it was a way to show her love to the nature.
